Boris Nikolov, owner of IMIC, one of clinical research sites for $SAVA clinical trials, owner of $SAVA stock, went on Youtube stock pumping channel, to openly tout $SAVA to retail investors. How often do you see this in a normal biotech company?

- Paul @lipa0902 · Oct 10, 2022
One of the clinical investigators in IMIC, Evelyn Lopez-Brignoni, received FDA Form 483 warning for not following clinical protocols. Shady clinical sites like this are great friends of biotech scammers like $SAVA Pay them options. They'll fake it for you.

- Evan Rowe @evanismanotdead · Oct 10, 2022
It takes like 10 minutes to spot the $SAVA fraud, so naturally authorities from multiple agencies have been working on it for over a year. At this point I will be shocked if any action is taken, and shocked even more if anyone is held to account.

- Jesse brodtkin @jesse_brodtkin · Oct 10, 2022
What if you had to document ALL of it and gather evidence to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that it's all lies intended to deceive? (Maybe that would take a year 😊), but yeah DOJ and CUNY need to stop dithering and show us what they've been doing for a year.

Jesse's right about the high reasonable doubt standard for DOJ. Under the more lenient standard the SEC uses, it appears the SEC didn't find anything to pursue. What are the chances the DOJ finds anything to satisfy the much higher burden of proof? Unlikely.

- Jesse brodtkin @jesse_brodtkin · Oct 10, 2022
Ok, so what's the hold up? (My theory is there is just too much fraud and they are overwhelmed and they thought Wang would roll on Remi, and he hasn't.... Yet) @jenthedefender, what's YOUR theory?
- TCB @TCBBIO · Oct 10, 2022
Fair question. My theory is they will wrap up with no charges based on: SEC closing recommendation, no apparent more serious "formal" investigation recommended by SEC, no apparent subpoenas as I expect shorts/longs would have heard something. "too much fraud" = SEC action yet none

- Jesse brodtkin @jesse_brodtkin · Oct 10, 2022
I can see how a $sava long might take some solace in the SEC shitting the bed. It would make a subsequent indictment by DOJ unusual, but not even close to the unusualness of $sava discovered a cure for AD, binds at femtomolar and defies the laws of thermodynamics etc Occam's raz

I have said it before, but the problem for $SAVA is that based on reading that Reuters article carefully, that the issues of most likely initial interest to the DOJ do not have anything to do with the SEC or securities laws.

What would be an example of something that \$SAVA could have done that WOULD interest DOJ but WOULD NOT interest SEC? Given they have to file all material items w SEC, any whiff of fraud would be a slam dunk Wells Notice then action. But they passed. Why? Legit Q

- Evan Rowe @evanisnotdead · Oct 11, 2022

I think there are a lot of things in this category. SEC is not equipped to determine if research is faked, but can certainly take action if other investigators confirm it.

- Paul @lipa0902 · Oct 11, 2022

You are right. That's why DOJ has hired experts to investigate \$SAVA research misconduct, according to the Reuter report.

Are you saying Paul is making accurate statements about the article and paying trial sites in stock options?

- Jesse brodkin @jesse_brodkin

- The Justice Department personnel conducting the investigation into Austin, Texas-based Cassava specialize in examining whether companies or individuals have misled or defrauded investors, government agencies or consumers, according to the sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity. The sources did not provide details of the focus of the probe and whether the department was looking into any specific individuals.

Wang disclosed he owns $SAVA options. We know Wang's lab was the sole lab to perform BM analysis for P2a/b/OL (LUND only did once when Wang lab was shutdown due to COVID). If Remi pays Wang in options, is it a stretch to think Remi may also paid other clinical sites in options?

A post-hoc analysis of biomarker data revealed high variability in levels of CSF biomarkers over 28 days. For example, placebo-treated patients recorded changes in levels of CSF tau and p-tau ranging from -54% to +34% and -49% to +253%, respectively, from baseline to Day 28.

You are certainly welcome to your opinion Jesse, you generally state it as such and provide some supporting evidence to your point. It would seem, coming from your point of view, making unsubstantiated dishonest statements would be unnecessary.

thanks. I'm not afraid to admit that's outside my area of knowledge to comment. But I'm sure the people that matter have reviewed it (FDA, NIH, SEC, DOJ) so ultimately we'll have to live with their opinions on it.

Jesse has been promoted from rat behaviourist to neurophysiologist. Perhaps he and Adrian should redo the trial irrespective FDA had no problems with the P2b results.
